Subject: The dot is here.

It's six months into the new Millennium. Where do you get your company news? Enron, cited as the Most Innovative Company in America for five years in a row, prints a newsletter every two months. We could reorganize entire business units between issues. Twice.

Don't worry. Our printed newsletter isn't going anywhere; it's still the best way to bring you detailed accounts of Enron's long-term business direction and achievements.

Let's just say that print has a new friend. And -- you guessed it -- that friend is the dot. As in "dot.com"; as in you now have an online connection for fast-breaking news about and around Enron. It's called eBiz, and it will change the way you get news. It might even change the way you think about news.

eBiz will come racing across the Enron intranet on home.enron.com every two weeks, and we will post breaking news and announcements as they happen. The news in eBiz will be so fresh and timely and fun to read, you may have to skip your morning coffee so you don't miss anything.

Get ready, get set, get connected with eBiz.
